

Never Over

by Allison

District Attorney Joe Maxwell finished his speech to the graduating class of Harvard Law school.

As his eyes scanned the crowd, his eyes met with another that he thought he would never see again.

Same gorgeous red hair with a hint of grey, warm brown eyes that still had the power to stop his heart, skin whose touch he could still recall 30 years later.

He wondered what she was doing there? Was she married? Was she happy? His throat constricted with the thought of even trying to talk to her. He couldn't breathe, couldn't think.

He whispered quietly. "Erica..."