

Making Mary

by Angie

Mary nearly tripped over a ball of yarn in her chamber and kicked it aside with annoyance. She looked over at the boxes of remnant yarn. They were both large and were overflowing onto the floor.

The shelf beside them, meant to hold items she made from the yarn, was empty. Not a bowl, bag, basket or blanket left!

Days later, the shelf boasted baskets, a bag, two knapsacks and two bowls. Two weeks after that, two blankets were added to them. The yarn pile was much reduced.

Within days, so were her creations!

Gremlins! Sighing, Mary got to work again.
