

A Beauty and the Beast Tidbit (100 words)

by Angie

Morning Energy

It was early. The Park air was clean and clear. Jogging, Catherine paused opposite the culvert. She liked to pause there, pay homage to the place of her rebirth - and the man who enriched her life.

Did he know she was here? She risked a glance down the culvert, imagining the gate - and Vincent beyond the steel door.

He was there, she was sure of it!

She sent him a blast of love along their bond, and immediately received one in return that made her brace herself. He would be smiling now.

She continued her run, now energized and happy.