

Egg Roll

The children managed to catch a short glimpse of Father's New York Times.

“This is really interesting. We should launch it as a tunnel custom as well,” they agreed, after some discussion.

“But I think this age limit is really stupid,” Zach interjected.

“Who says we can't develop a custom of our own? We can create a more personal style, you know!” Samantha replied.

So ever since then, at Easter, following the example set by the President, it had become a tradition that the adults, accompanied by a tunnel child, started off their own egg rolling contest.